Wild Nothing Shares New Single, “Blue Wings” Listen HERE

Wild Nothing, project of Virginia-based Jack Tatum, shares a new standalone single, “Blue Wings.” Following the release of his fourth album, Indigo, last year via Captured Tracks, “Blue Wings” is a polished reassurance of Tatum’s knack of creating a colorful, textured track that doesn’t shy away from expanding upon his classic dream-pop sound. Synonymously sweet and melancholy, “Blue Wings” serves as a grounding reminder through anxiety and uncertainty.

*“There were a number of songs that were kicking when I was finishing Indigo and ‘Blue Wings’ was very nearly included. I had sent the album off to mastering, but the song didn’t sit right with me and I decided, at the last possible moment, to leave it off the album. It’s intentionally a very bittersweet sounding song. I asked Ben Talmi who did the string arrangements on ‘Shadow’ to help out with this very simple dissonant string part I was hearing in my head which is now my favorite element in the track. It’s a song about walking through to the other side of crippling self-doubt with the help of someone you love. It’s a reminder to myself not to let things spiral, hard as it may be at times.”*

Wild Nothing returns to the UK and Asia in the spring in support of Indigo. All tour dates are below.
