“Sam Evian offers rock songs about vulnerability and desire that are gentle and sweet but avoid the most saccharine tendencies of soft rock. It’s a delicate balancing act, and one he pulls off with aplomb.” - Pitchfork

“The track is a beautiful little diamond of Sunday morning guitars and Marvin Gaye-style bass grooves.” - Paste on “Next to You”

Sam Evian (a.k.a. Sam Owens) is sharing two new songs before his North American tour with Cass McCombs in March and his U.K. headline tour in August. “Cherry Tree” and “Roses” will be released by Saddle Creek as a limited edition 7” (250 copies) that is available for pre-order now. The 7” comes on the heels of Sam’s sophomore album, You, Forever, which came out in 2018.

Both songs shine a light on the evolution of Sam Evian’s music. “Cherry Tree” is a daydream of the first warm hints of spring, which came to Sam as he took in the sun under a cherry tree in New York’s Central Park. It was also the first song that Sam Owens ever released as Sam Evian. The song has remained a fan favorite and a staple of his rousing live set. “Tell me life’s a passing cloud,” he urges amid a charming backdrop of lilting guitars, gorgeous piano flourishes, and a swelling harmony-vocal chorus.

“Roses,” an unreleased song from the You, Forever sessions, offers a lyrically complex but equally reflective outlook as its 7” counterpart. “I’d like to travel freely and see the old roads that I’ve known...”

Sam will get to do lots of driving in the next several months. New dates are announced today, including appearances at End of the Road Festival and Manchester Psych Fest, as well as UK headlining shows. Additionally, new shows have been added to the previously announced North American tour with Cass McCombs.

You, Forever was Sam Evian's first foray into a more soul-baring sensibility. As it has been said: no matter where you go, there you are. With You, Forever, Sam Evian is here to add some eternity to that sentiment. "This is you, forever," he says. "It's about accepting that you are responsible for you, that you're in charge of your actions. Everything you do affects others and yourself, so, no matter what you choose to do, be there and learn from it." It's a mantra that powers Sam Evian and is echoed across You, Forever.

You, Forever was recorded on eight-track reel-to-reel tape in a house in upstate New York with Brian Betancourt (bass), Austin Vaughn (drums), Adam Brisbin (guitar), and Hannah Cohen (backup vocals) and is available to purchase from Saddle Creek here.
