“There’s an immediacy to Alex Lahey’s music so urgent that it’ll hook you before you even notice it’s happening.” — GQ

“The best of ‘The Best of Luck Club’ marks a new level of maturity, compressing a multitude of emotions within a single song.” — Pitchfork

“Throughout the ten tracks, containing her signature playful and hyper-specific lyrics, Lahey uses TBOLC to ruminate on everything from heartbreak to career lows, from mental health to vibrators.” — Billboard

“On ‘The Best Of Luck Club,’ the Australian songwriter forges ahead and never loses her faith in fun.” — MTV News

“Alex Lahey’s ‘The Best Of Luck Club’ is a witty and confessional pop-punk gem.” — Uproxx
This past spring, Alex Lahey released her sophomore album, The Best of Luck Club, “...a welcome and wide-open look at mid-twenties inertia and queer romance” (Pitchfork), via Dead Oceans. The album’s centerpiece is “Unspoken History”, a sparse, melancholic tune which catches Lahey at her most vulnerable. Today, she presents a video showcasing a special, intimate performance of the track in its most distilled version.

“‘Unspoken History’ is perhaps the most personal song on the album. So personal that I’d rather keep the direct story behind it to myself - at least for now,” says Lahey. “The song was written on my girlfriend’s guitar in a tiny room in Nashville. This video more or less depicts the song in its purest form - played on the very same guitar, exactly how I first heard it when it spilled out of my mouth.”

Fresh off a blazing tour kick off at Outside Lands, Lahey is currently in the midst of her first North American tour in support of The Best of Luck Club. This week, she plays DC, NYC, Philly, and Boston before heading back through the Midwest to the west coast. A full list of dates are below.
