Today, The FADER is streaming Katie Von Schleicher's deeply personal new album, Consummation, which is out tomorrow via Ba Da Bing. While exploring past trauma, Von Schleicher greatly expands her sonic palette; its 13 shape-shifting songs are at once potent and listenable, strange and familiar, and, perhaps most of all, teeming with life. At its core, Consummation evokes the pain of being unable to bridge that vast psychic distance between oneself and another. Ahead of its release, Von Schleicher presented a string of compelling singles and videos - "Brutality," "Wheel," "Nowhere," and "Caged Sleep."

The follow-up to her 2017 debut Shitty Hits, Consummation is, in part, inspired by an alternate interpretation of Hitchcock's Vertigo. Von was struck by its largely unanalyzed subtext of abuse. She knew immediately that this hidden narrative, which spoke to her personal experience, would be the basis of her album. Rebecca Solnit's A Field Guide to Getting Lost also proved to be particularly influential; soon after revisiting Vertigo, Von Schleicher stumbled upon Solnit's lacerating take on the film, describing the "wandering, , stalking, haunting" of romantic pursuit that it depicts as "consummation," while "real communion"—understanding and mutual respect between two lovers—is, to the men in the film, "unimaginable." The consequence is a fundamental failure of communication.

Praise for Consummation

"It's a cinematic and remarkably poised record, lunging from one uncanny melody to the next." - The FADER

"The album itself has many different moods, but Von Schleicher masters them all with her keen rock sensibilities... Consummation could be Katie Von Schleicher's biggest jumping-off point yet." - Paste

"Her voice still has that same haunting timbre, but now it sounds motivated and optimistic, like she's realizing her mystical powers and deciding what to do with them."

- Consequence of Sound

"The Brooklyn artist plumbs darker depths than before, offsetting her stark lyrics with bright, jangling melodies in the search for inner-peace" - NME
