"[Muzz] have made a great new album together." - NPR Music

"Songs build around [Banks] with muted opulence; frequently deployed horns and organs color the margins without overwhelming the music's essential fragility."

-- New Yorker

“A surprisingly comfortable pastiche of the three artists’ distinct sounds, compounding the uneasiness of Interpol, the playfulness of The Walkmen, and the tranquil twang of BLH.” --

“A moody, melodic masterpiece” - SPIN

“These veteran musicians have crafted a gleaming epistle of sophisticated pop art—Muzz have raised the bar for indie rock.” -- Chicago Reader

Last month, Muzz released their self-titled debut, “an album that bears the tide marks of its creators — [Matt] Barrick’s jazzy swing, multi-instrumentalist [Josh] Kaufman’s soft warmth, [Paul] Banks’s instantly identifiable baritone — but it defies easy categorization” (The FADER). Today, the longtime friends and collaborators present a video for the laid back and nostalgic “Summer Love.” On “Summer Love,” muted organ by Kaufman and flute by Stuart Bogie drift along as the song rides out on the main vibe and vocal line by Banks: “I’m in the race//I’m on the get-go//I wanna skate//I want the XO// Summer love//Summer love ends//Silence is sung we won’t remember.” The video combines “footage Matt shot a few years ago of a deserted drive-through theater, with clips we individually generated during lockdown and the majestically psychedelic collage work of the great Andrew McGranahan. It’s what we feel is a nice visual poem to accompany the song,” says Banks. “Rather than a summer lockdown document, we aimed more to emulate the work of Truffaut, Fellini, or Cassavetes and to capture three stories of romance and solitude. Lofty aspirations, humble result; but we hope you enjoy it even a fraction as much as we did creating it.”
