"[Kelly Lee Owens is] reclaiming space for women in dance music in really powerful and important ways." - NPR Music

"a restorative new album about self-discovery and balance. . . [Inner Song] erupts with dreamy dance music that is, by turns, mobile and meditative." - New Yorker

"Three minutes into ['On'], the throbbing bass line suddenly cranks up, staggered against programmed hi-hats, a blooming synthesizer line and cascading, wordless vocals; [Kelly Lee Owens] can dance her way free." - New York Times

"Owens is the real thing, creating a kind of sublime robot-gospel music that's exhilarating to hear." - Rolling Stone

"Where before Owens used primarily sonics to express shifts in mood, she's now using words — in fact using both, in ecstatic unison." -- Stereogum, Album of the Week

"one of the best [albums] of the year." - GQ

Last month, producer/musician Kelly Lee Owens released her new album, Inner Song, on Smalltown Supersound to incredible acclaim. Today, she unveils a video for “Corner of My Sky,” an Inner Song track born out of a collaboration with John Cale. Throughout “Cale speak-sings a poem about the rain over a quietly purring synth melody that gradually crescendos . . . Owens’ production is clean and crisp, and the two have a natural chemistry that makes you question whether the song was built around Cale’s vocals or vice versa” (Entertainment Weekly). The “Corner of My Sky” video materializes the track’s foreboding mood, giving a mundane toaster a mystical capability. Directed by frequent collaborator Kasper Haggström and shot in the Brecon Beacons mountain range of South Wales, the video stars actor Michael Sheen, a fellow Welsh talent and KLO fan. Sheen says: “I’ve loved Kelly’s music for a while now and the opportunity to be part of a Kelly-John Cale-magic toaster holy Welsh trinity was too good to miss!”

“I knew I wanted a visual for ‘Color of My Sky’ and having been connected to Michael Sheen earlier in the year, I dared asked if he would like to be involved,” says Owens. “Luckily he said yes! In Wales we live by the sentiment that ‘If you don’t ask, you don’t get.’ And so a true Welsh collaboration in the form of John Cale, Michael and I was formed. The idea for the video was changed (very) last minute by Kasper, a Norwegian director who I have worked with on my last few videos including ‘Throwing Lines’ and ‘On’ and it was weird, trippy and hilarious - the perfect combo! Michael’s performance alongside John’s vocals and the magic toaster portal is gold and something I’m very happy to have out in the world.”
