Last Saturday, Parquet Courts premiered a new song on Japanese radio station FM Karuizawa during Dr. Rob's show. The song, "Plant Life," represents the first new original material from the band since 2018's Wide Awake!, and will be available to fans via the newly-announced limited-edition, physical-only "Plant Life" 12-inch, out now via Rough Trade and available only via the Rough Trade webstore and the band's website. Additionally, the band have announced a string of new tour dates, which go on sale on Wednesday at 9am EST.

"'Plant Life' the song is my story of rediscovering my passion for music through New York City dance floors," says Austin Brown. "It's a distillation from a 40 plus minute improvisation prompted by producer Rodaidh McDonald, and every way we've sliced it up illustrates a different mood of the same perspective of ecstasy and aspiration to not only grow, but form roots outside of our own barriers."

Side B features a remix of "Plant Life" from Vancouver's Yu Su that funks up the bassline as well as a celestial mix from Peak Wifi (Austin Brown and Bryce Hackford) reminiscent of Midori Takada.
