Earlier this year, IAN SWEET (project of Jilian Medford) released her new album, Show Me How You Disappear, via Polyvinyl. Its accolades include high praise from Pitchfork, NPR Music, New Yorker, NYLON, FLOOD, and more, plus much fanfare. Today, she presents an otherworldly cover of “Yellow” by Coldplay (one of her favorite bands) with an accompanying video. Like Show Me How You Disappear, whose “best songs swell in your chest like prime-era Broken Social Scene” (Pitchfork), her cover of “Yellow” feels cathartic. Produced by Daniel Fox, her voice surges over twinkling keys and anthemic percussion and guitar. The accompanying self-directed video, shot by Will Duncan, mimics the original Coldplay video by James Frost and Alex Smith of The Artists Company. “I’ve seen Coldplay live 6 times,” says Medford. “Parachutes was the first CD I ever rented from the library and it changed my life. I owe a lot of who I am, and the way I write and perform music to Coldplay. I wanted to cover 'Yellow' because it is my go-to karaoke song, love song, breakup song, feel good song...it's everything."

PRAISE FOR *SHOW ME HOW YOU DISAPPEAR

“The mightiest music of her life.” - Pitchfork

“There’s such a fantastic release in these songs. Over and over again it [feels] like this glorious exhalation.” - NPR Music

“The music threatens to engulf the singer, but she forever hangs in, more resilient than she may at first seem.” - New Yorker

“[Show Me How You Disappear] aims for the cosmos but lands in an indie-pop Twilight Zone, spinning a web of confessional lyrics, distorted riffs, and glittery hooks.”
- Rolling Stone

“Across 10 stormy tracks, Show Me How You Disappear probes the aftermath of that traumatic time unflinchingly as she navigates the subsequent healing and moving forward without losing sight of the transcendent beauty that recovery can hold.”
- NYLON
