Beach Fossils share new single “Down The Line \(Piano\)” from their new album The Other Side of Life: Piano Ballads, out November 19th on Bayonet. “I’ve regularly attempted to harness the feeling that I get while listening to jazz and pour it into my songs,” says the band’s Dustin Payseur. “There’s always been an element of jazz in Beach Fossils; chords are rarely played, instead the instruments typically play single-notes that come together to create chords. I think a lot of that comes from listening to jazz trios and quartets, hearing the way that the instruments weave in and out of each other, leaving space for each other, instruments coming up front for a bit while others wait.”

Inspired by a love of artists such as Bill Evans, Lester Young, Chet Baker and Vince Guaraldi, Payseur reimagines some of his greatest hits from the Beach Fossils catalogue alongside a group of formally trained jazz musicians, including former drummer Tommy Gardner. On The Other Side Of Life, Gardner plays piano, saxophone and upright bass with Henry Kwapis on drums and Payseur's vocals acting as the common thread between the original versions and these breathtaking renditions.

The result is a gorgeous, intoxicating collection of some of Beach Fossils' most beloved tunes, experienced through a totally fresh sonic lens. Payseur elaborates: "A song by itself is naked, there are endless possibilities for how to dress a song and every choice creates a radically different outcome. Making this album let me step back and see these songs from a new perspective. I hope you'll enjoy what we've done with them."
