“The situation in ‘Thumbs’ couldn’t be more quietly fraught...Lucy Dacus sings with sweet determination, sustaining a foursquare melody over misty electronic chords while envisioning mayhem. ‘I would kill him if you let me,’ she croons, and it’s clear she means it.”

- The New York Times

“What a sad story, so amazingly sung and told.” - NPR Music

"[Lucy Dacus'] sharp lyrics and ascendant voice are a galelike force, and her new song 'Thumbs' removes all other musical elements to zone in on that gripping intensity."

- Entertainment Weekly

"[Lucy Dacus] has inadvertently created a new asshole dad anthem . . . It was well-worth the three-year wait for this knockout." - The AV Club

"['Thumbs' is] a deeply affecting track" - The FADER

Before there was news of Home Video, an album which captured the complexities of Lucy Dacus' formative years growing up in Richmond, VA, leading her to be named "one of the best songwriters of her generation" (Rolling Stone), Lucy presented the long-awaited "Thumbs" to the world. Debuted on tour in 2018 while on the road with boygenius, "Thumbs" became a fan favorite, immediately and deeply impacting audiences: "Depending on what you've been through in your life, those words might leave you weeping in public, too," commented Stereogum. Lucy now releases a full-band version of the arresting original, titled "Thumbs Again." Here, the simple instrumental backbone of "Thumbs" is filled out with electric guitar, synth, and drums and is how many have heard the song on Lucy's recent tour. Listen to Lucy delve deep into "Thumbs" via the recently released Song Exploder episode.

Following last week's performance on The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon, Lucy announces a winter 2022 North American tour, which includes rescheduled dates for five shows. These new dates follow an incredible fall tour, including three nights of sold out shows at both New York's Brooklyn Steel and Washington DC's 9:30 Club, and precede her UK and European tour in support of Home Video.
