Parquet Courts, fresh off their recent U.S. tour, performed the Sympathy For Life standout, “Walking At A Downtown Pace” last night on Jimmy Kimmel Live! The New York quartet is known for their talents in “finding a new road map on the dance floor” (Rolling Stone), with last night’s performance perfectly encapsulating their raucous live energy. Later this month, Parquet Courts will embark on a full European tour, and will be performing at the Pitchfork Music Festival in July. Full tour dates are listed below.

PRAISE FOR SYMPATHY FOR LIFE

"Parquet Courts' music is propelled by the tension between the head and the hips, with the itchy lyricism of the vocalists Andrew Savage and Austin Brown providing a counterpoint to Sean Yeaton and Max Savage's buoyant rhythm section." - The New York Times

"On their latest album, Sympathy for Life, Parquet Courts abandon the fiction of certainty, take the elevator back to street level, and get the people moving."
- Pitchfork

"With Sympathy For Life, they have another strong entry in a nearly bulletproof catalog. But more importantly, they are showing they can transform without losing their incisiveness. Parquet Courts are evolving, and the sound is as exhilarating as ever." - Stereogum
